Rationale UI Redo

For this redo I changed a lot of things with the structure. I included many more images and used some typefaces that were helpful in bringing out my personality such as the Noteworthy typeface. I made sure to change the grid to 1280x8000 and used the space to my advantage. I tried to line the words up accordingly to the images and picked images that were going along with what the text was saying. For the navigation bar, I used ellipses that said the title of the page and it would change color for every page from home to about, etc. This would be a sticky navigation, which means that it stays on the screen as you scroll down. The home page is mainly consistent of the first picture which describes my personality and the about page goes along with it so that it explains more as you scroll. The work page showcases the work I have done and includes a link to the video. Finally, the contact page includes a message box and social media icons. Overall, I think it was a step up from what I did for the first time and I think it looks much better. I still wanted to use the space and grid a little better and include more of my work information but I like the way it turned out and how I was able to incorporate the main elements of my biography into the about page.
